BIOGRAPHY

Background:

Mark Pattison is a former NFL player attempting to climb the Seven Summits. Once successful, he will become the first NFL player to ever do so. To date, he has been on 6 of the world's tallest peaks (Mt Kilimanjaro, Mt Elbrus, Mt Kosciuszko, Aconcagua, Denali and Vinson) with Everest left in 2021. He will also be attempting to scale Lhotse, the 4th highest mountain in the world within 24 hours of climbing Mt Everest to put him in rare air as only a handful of mountaineers have completed this.

Mark played 5 years in the NFL and then went on to start several successful multi-million dollar businesses in which one was venture backed and acquired by University Games. Today, Mark is a senior executive for Sports Illustrated.

TESTIMONIALS

"Mark did a great job presenting to our marketing organization. He effectively tied his themes and mission around the 7 summits with current and future challenges, motivating our marketing teams."

- Global Marketing VP of Medtronic

"Thank you again for supporting our meeting. It was a huge success and you received great reviews at the end of my meeting during the recap."

- National Channel Manager of Canon

Mark brought inspiration as a keynote speaker to our annual conference without any rah-rah, but in a genuine sense, and real-life application. He was able to break his life lessons down into teachable business concepts.

- CEO of Security 101
